

Respect the rights of our coworkers

The ninth point of the Code of Excellence is “respect the rights of our coworkers.” NECA/IBEW Local 48 members come from all walks of life and their own unique backgrounds. One thing is constant though, they all rely on each other both on the job site and off.

Our members are only as strong as the team they work with. Respecting coworkers’ opinions and ideas, listening to their viewpoint and using their ideas to change or improve work helps create a strong, cohesive unit.

Whether a coworker is employed by the same company as yours, or if they are employed by a different firm, we are all members of the electrical industry and should be treated with dignity and respect.

Utilize the skills and abilities we have learned to gain a competitive advantage

The partnership prides itself on providing continual training on the most cutting-edge technology and practices. It is this commitment that helps set NECA/IBEW Local 48 members apart in the industry.

Clients have many different options when choosing an electrical company for their project. Providing work that meets the latest codes, safety practices and equipment means that clients do not have to spend additional time or money to go back and fix mistakes or make updates.

When clients see the NECA/IBEW Local 48 name, they know that means having the safest and most up-to-date practices being used on their projects. This makes our members the more desirable choice.
