

Respect management directives that are safe, reasonable and legitimate

Being a NECA/IBEW Local 48 member means you are part of a team, and following leaders is a vital part of being a team.

Listening to supervisors is not only a sign of respect, but it helps keep everyone on the job site safe. At every stage of the project, they give directions to keep their electricians safe, as well as everyone else who comes onto the job site.

At a given moment on a work site, supervisors are tracking several dozen different jobs happening all at one time. When everyone listens to their directions it helps prevent potentially dangerous situations.

Supervisors are also responsible for the overall success of the project. Again, when people follow directions, it helps bring a project in on time and on budget.

Respect the customer's rights and property

In addition to respecting co-workers and management, it is important to NECA/IBEW Local 48 that electricians be respectful of the fact that a job site belongs to the customer.

Respecting a customer's property means not only leaving a job site in better shape than when a project started, but also:

- Not smoking on the property
- Keeping the jobsite as tidy and clean as possible
- Being careful with equipment so not to damage surfaces
- Not driving equipment or vehicles over landscaping
- Following any instructions given by the customers

Customers have a lot of choices for their electrical needs, and most hire NECA/IBEW Local 48 members because they trust that not only will the electricians provide the best work safely, but that they will treat them with respect and their property with the utmost care.
